

Michèle C. Rey

Head of Young Graduate
BNP Paribas

You have been recruiting at the Institute for several years. How does this collaboration benefit you?

The long-lasting partnership with the Graduate Institute has produced, for BNP Paribas, fruitful results. We have found that students graduating from the Institute possess significant knowledge and skills related to global political, economic and social challenges. Their ability to address issues by taking into account multiple perspectives is an outstanding value for our bank.

What qualities do our students have that particularly interest you?

We appreciate their ability to explore issues from various perspectives as well as their analytical and synthetical skills. Moreover, their keen interest in global policy issues, ability to speak several languages and motivation to pursue intercultural experiences represent an important strength.

What types of positions are available?

→ Internships for a minimum period of 6 months

Internships give students the opportunity to explore the diversity of the banking sector and benefit from the expertise of BNP Paribas' professional teams

→ Graduate Programmes for a period of 18 months

Graduate Programmes are aimed at students who already possess professional experience within the financial sector. The programmes are available in different functions of the bank

“We have found that students graduating from the Institute possess significant knowledge”