The Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies

L'Institut est un établissement de recherche et d'enseignement supérieur spécialisé dans l'étude des affaires mondiales, en particulier de celles qui se trouvent à l'intersection des relations internationales et des questions du développement.

A travers nos activités, nous souhaitons promouvoir la coopération internationale et apporter une contribution au développement académique de sociétés moins favorisées. Plus largement, nous nous efforçons de stimuler une réflexion novatrice sur les défis du monde contemporain, d'encourager un sentiment de responsabilité globale et de favoriser le respect de la diversité.

The Graduate Institute is a leading institution of research and higher education dedicated to the study of world affairs, with a particular emphasis on the cross-cutting fields of international relations and development issues.

Through our core activities, we aim to promote international cooperation and make an academic contribution to the progress of developing societies. More broadly, we endeavour to develop creative thinking on the major challenges of our time, foster global responsibility and advance respect for diversity.

LE MOT DU DIRECTEUR MESSAGE FROM THE DIRECTOR

L'Institut a terminé en 2011 sa quatrième année d'existence. Le changement intervenu depuis 2008 est frappant, il est à la fois d'échelle et de substance :

- une nouvelle institution s'est affirmée, à laquelle adhèrent ses collaborateurs ;
- le corps enseignant a été largement renouvelé (25 nouveaux professeurs, dont huit femmes) et les étudiants, bien sélectionnés et bien encadrés, ont un taux de finition élevé ;
- sept centres et programmes de recherche travaillent sur des thématiques où Genève et la Suisse ont un avantage comparé ;
- le partenariat avec l'Université de Genève a produit d'excellents résultats (Académie de droit international humanitaire et de droits humains – ADH ; Master en règlement des différends internationaux – MIDS ; Centre d'enseignement et de recherche en action humanitaire – CERAH), tout comme la collaboration avec le Réseau suisse pour les études internationales (SNIS) ;
- le réseau académique embrasse une vingtaine de partenaires, dont une demi-douzaine dans les pays émergents, le réservoir démographique de l'humanité ;
- la formation continue est en pleine expansion ;
- enfin, la réalisation du Campus de la paix apportera prochainement une infrastructure de qualité.

Le soutien des autorités publiques a été déterminant dans ce changement. Et de même, le soutien d'un cercle croissant de bienfaiteurs (fondations et mécènes) qui nous ont permis de réaliser une levée de fonds de plus de 90 millions CHF, à mettre en vis-à-vis de la contribution exceptionnelle de 100 millions CHF de la Confédération et du canton de Genève (principalement pour la Maison de la paix).

Cet essor, nous le devons également aux collaborateurs de l'Institut, à la qualité de leur travail et à la force de leur engagement qui nous permettent de poursuivre un effort constant d'amélioration, ainsi qu'à la sympathie et à l'appui de nos anciens et de nos amis à travers le monde. Enfin, nous le devons à des atouts dont la valeur nous apparaît toujours davantage et qu'il nous faut continuer d'utiliser de manière optimale :

- une taille et un mode de gouvernance particulièrement favorables à la définition d'une stratégie à long terme ;
- l'application du principe de sélectivité à tous les niveaux ;
- un statut juridique et une flexibilité de gestion propices à des partenariats public-privé, rares dans les sciences sociales.

Philippe Burrin

In 2011, the Graduate Institute completed its fourth year of existence. The changes that have taken place since 2008 are striking both in their scale and substance:

- A new institution has emerged and enjoys the full support of its staff;
- The faculty has been largely renewed (25 new professors, including eight women) and among the students, carefully selected and closely supervised, the rate of completion is high;
- The seven research centres and programmes focus on themes in which Geneva and Switzerland have a comparative advantage;
- The partnership with the University of Geneva has produced excellent results (the Geneva Academy of International Humanitarian Law and Human Rights – ADH, the Master in International Dispute Settlement – MIDS, the Geneva Centre for Education and Research in Humanitarian Action – CERAH) as well as the collaboration with the Swiss Network for International Studies (SNIS);
- The academic network comprises some twenty partners, including half a dozen from emerging countries, home to the vast majority of the world's population;
- Executive education continues to grow;
- Finally, completion of the “Campus de la paix” means that the Institute will shortly have new state-of-the-art infrastructure.

The support of the public authorities has been crucial to these developments. Similarly, the backing of a growing circle of foundations and patrons has enabled us to raise more than CHF 90 million – thereby nearly matching the one-off contribution of CHF 100 million from the Confederation and the Canton of Geneva (principally to fund the “Maison de la paix”).

We also owe this success to the quality of the work and strong engagement by the Institute's faculty and staff, which have allowed us to strive for constant improvement, as well as to the support and loyalty of our alumni and friends throughout the world. Finally, this momentum was possible thanks to our assets of constantly growing value. We endeavour to strive to continue to make the best use of these:

- A size and governance structure that are especially well-suited to the definition of a long-term strategy;
- Application of the principle of selectivity at all levels;
- A legal status and management flexibility that are particularly well matched to public-private partnerships, seldom found in the field of social sciences.

Philippe Burrin

It held three sessions to make decisions on the Institute's major strategic orientations, academic activities as well as financial and real-estate related issues. Most importantly it:

- approved the filing of project plans for the Penthes Estate in response to a call for projects announced by the State Council and Republic and Canton of Geneva.

Dans le domaine immobilier, le Conseil a approuvé les propositions de la Commission immobilière pour la réalisation de la Maison de la paix, le choix de l'entreprise générale Steiner SA, de même que celui du Credit Suisse auprès duquel l'Institut effectuera un emprunt hypothécaire pour compléter le financement assuré par les subventions du canton de Genève et de la Confédération et les dons de la Fondation Hans Wilsdorf et de M^{me} Kathryn W. Davis.

In the area of real estate, the Board approved proposals by the real estate committee concerning the building of the "Maison de la paix" to designate the company Steiner SA as the construction site's general contractor, and to take out a mortgage loan from Credit Suisse to complete the financing provided through public funding from the Canton of Geneva and the Swiss Confederation as well as donations by the Hans Wilsdorf Foundation and Mrs Kathryn W. LE CAMPUS DE LA PAIX

“CAMPUS DE LA PAIX”

Le Campus de la paix a pris forme au cours de l'année 2011. La phase des procédures d'autorisation une fois terminée, les chantiers ont démarré pour la Maison de la paix et la Maison des étudiants, tandis qu'une rénovation partielle de la villa Barton débutait. Un contrat d'emprunt a été finalisé avec le Credit Suisse ; l'emprunt complètera le financement public et les dons pour la Maison de la paix, ainsi que les dons pour la Maison des étudiants.

La Maison des étudiants Edgar de Picciotto

Le chantier de la Maison des étudiants Edgar de Picciotto a avancé à vive allure tout au long de 2011. A la fin de l'année, le gros œuvre était pratiquement terminé. En automne 2012, l'immeuble accueillera 243 étudiants dans 135 logements (72 studios et 63 appartements).

La Maison de la paix

En juillet 2011, à l'issue d'un appel d'offres, la société Steiner SA a été choisie pour réaliser le bâtiment en entreprise générale. Le 24 octobre 2011 a eu lieu la pose de la première pierre en présence de Mme Micheline Calmy-Rey, présidente de la Confédération suisse, de M. Mark Muller, président du Conseil d'Etat de la République et canton de Genève, et de M. Pierre Maudet, maire de la Ville de Genève. Ce moment fort a été marqué par le dépôt d'une série d'objets symboliques dans une pierre qui sera placée à l'entrée du bâtiment.

The “Campus de la paix” began to take shape in 2011. Once the administrative procedures were completed, building started on the “Maison de la paix” and the Student House, while a partial renovation was initiated on the Villa Barton. A loan agreement was reached with Credit Suisse that will complete the resources obtained through public funding and donations for the “Maison de la paix” in addition to donations for the Student House.

The Edgar de Picciotto Student House

Construction of the Edgar de Picciotto Student House progressed rapidly throughout 2011. At the end of the year, the main structural work was nearly complete. Starting in autumn 2012, the building will accommodate 243 students in 135 housing units (72 studios and 63 apartments).

“Maison de la paix”

In July 2011, following a call for bids, the company Steiner SA was chosen to carry out the construction work. On 24 October 2011, the Institute held a ceremony to celebrate the laying of the first stone with the participation of Ms Micheline Calmy-Rey, President of the Swiss Confederation, Mr Mark Muller, President of the Council of State of the Republic and Canton of Geneva, and Mr Pierre Maudet, Mayor of the City of Geneva. To mark this key moment, a series of symbolic objects were placed inside the stone that will be visible in the entryway of the building.

Villa Barton et villa Rigot

Le Portail des nations

La demande de renseignements a été déposée et a reçu un accueil positif auprès du Département des constructions et des technologies de l'information (DCTI). De son côté, le Conseil d'Etat du canton de Genève a confirmé son soutien à la réalisation de ce projet qui doit être mené de front avec le réaménagement du parc Rigot et aboutir à la construction d'un petit bâtiment « topographique » — selon le mot de l'architecte Charles Pictet — en bordure de la place des Nations. Cette construction financée par la Fondation Pictet offrira des locaux à l'Institut et surtout une surface d'accueil et d'exposition sur la Genève internationale.

Villa Barton and Villa Rigot

The partial renovation of Villa Barton began during the second half of the year. The Swiss Confederation, owner of the site, decided to improve the building's insulation by replacing the roof, windows and window frames, and stone work. Many of the staff who worked in Villa Barton moved temporarily to other sites, notably the Voie-Creuse building, while management moved to the Villa Rigot, which the Institute is renting from the Canton of Geneva for two years.

“Portail des nations”

The Institute sought planning permission for this project which was met with positive feedback from the State Construction Department (DCTI). The Council of State of the Canton of Geneva confirmed its support for the project, which must be carried out in conjunction with the redesign of Park Rigot. It will include a small building that, in the words of the architect Charles Pictet, will be “topographical”; it will be situated right outside the grounds of the United Nations. This construction financed by the Pictet Foundation will provide additional offices for the Institute along with a space to welcome visitors and house exhibitions on International Geneva.

LA CAMPAGNE DE RECHERCHE DE FONDS

L'Institut est engagé activement dans une campagne de recherche de fonds pour soutenir son développement. L'objectif de cette campagne, fixé en 2008 à 50 millions CHF à réunir avant 2012, a été dépassé dès 2010 grâce au soutien du Comité de patronage et à la générosité de nombreux donateurs.

The Institute is actively engaged in a fundraising campaign to support its further development. The campaign goal of CHF 50 million by 2012, set in 2008, was exceeded in 2010 thanks to the support of the Patrons' Committee and the generosity of numerous donors.

L'ENSEIGNEMENT TEACHING

LES PROGRAMMES D'ÉTUDES STUDY PROGRAMMES

Animé par le souci constant d'améliorer la qualité et la pertinence de son enseignement, l'Institut a procédé en 2011 à plusieurs changements notables.

D'une part, il a introduit une nouvelle filière d'études au niveau du master et du doctorat dans le domaine de l'anthropologie et de la sociologie du développement. Il a complété, en outre, le doctorat d'économie internationale par un doctorat d'économie du développement. D'autre part, deux innovations ont été introduites qui élargissent l'éventail des choix pour les étudiants et renforcent la compétitivité de l'Institut :

- Une « filière rapide » permet d'être admis en doctorat dès la fin du troisième semestre du programme de master et d'effectuer le parcours complet master-doctorat en cinq ans au lieu de six.
- Les doctorants ont la possibilité de faire une thèse dans deux disciplines, l'une choisie comme « majeure » l'autre comme « mineure », et d'acquérir ainsi un diplôme où figure le caractère bidisciplinaire de leur doctorat.

In order to continually improve the quality and relevance of its teaching, the Institute made several important changes to its curriculum in 2011.

It created new Master and PhD programmes in Anthropology and Sociology of Development as well as added a PhD in Development Economics to the existing PhD in International Economics. In addition, two innovations were implemented; these increase the number of options available to students and enhance the competitiveness of the Institute.

- A "fast track" allows students to be admitted to PhD programmes from the end of the third semester of Master programmes and complete a Master and PhD in five years instead of six.
- PhD students can now prepare a thesis in two disciplines, one as a "major" and the other as a "minor" and obtain a diploma that reflects the bidisciplinary nature of their degree.

LES NOUVEAUX PROFESSEURS NEW PROFESSORS

L'Institut recrute à la fois de jeunes chercheurs prometteurs et des chercheurs confirmés pour renforcer l'éventail de ses compétences. En 2011, il a reçu plusieurs centaines de candidatures du monde entier pour les cinq postes qu'il a mis au concours. En septembre 2011, quatre nouveaux professeurs (trois professeurs adjoints et un professeur assistant), dont une femme, ont rejoint ses rangs.

The Institute recruits both accomplished researchers and promising young scholars in order to strengthen its expertise. In 2011, the Institute received several hundred applications from around the world for five new academic posts. In September 2011, four new professors (three associate professors and an assistant professor), including one woman, joined the Institute's faculty.

RAVI BHAVNANI

Associate Professor, International Relations / Political Science

Previously Assistant Professor at Michigan State University

“ My recent work includes the research projects: “Futures of Jerusalem”, which uses data on the ethnic composition of administrative units and geo-coded data on every violent event in the city from 2001-2009; “Violent Cities”, which extends the analysis to other contested urban spaces such as Nairobi and Rio de Janeiro; “The Dynamics of Collaboration”, which examines the prevalence of defection and denunciation at the microlevel, given the central role that information plays in the conflict involving Israel, Hamas, and Fatah; “Calculating Commitment”, which considers conflict and cooperation among different (Ultra-Orthodox) religious groups in Israel.”

ZACHARY DOUGLAS

Associate Professor, International Law

Previously Faculty Member at the University of Cambridge

“ I have been involved as an advocate in cases across many of the specialised areas of international law including international investment, human rights, maritime and territorial boundaries, diplomatic and state immunities, environmental law, state succession and recognition and armed conflict. I have studied law in Melbourne, Moscow and Oxford and practised law in London and Paris. I am fluent in English, French and Russian and have conducted bilingual arbitration proceedings in Russian.”

DAVIDE RODOGNO

Associate Professor, International History

“ I am currently leading a research project entitled “From Relief to Rehabilitation: The History of Humanitarian Actions in the Aftermath of the First World War”. In 2011, I completed two books Shaping the Transnational Sphere: The Transnational Networks of Experts (1840-1930), and Against Massacre: Humanitarian Interventions in the Ottoman Empire (1815-1914), The Birth of a Concept and International Practice. The reason I am interested in history is to ask questions about the past that I think are relevant for current situations. My work focuses on exchanges of populations, refugees, food, shelter and health programmes, and more ambitious resettlement programmes.”

MARTINA VIARENGO

Assistant Professor, Development Economics

Previously Economist at the Centre for Economic Performance of the London School of Economics

“ I have always been interested in development issues and how public policy can be used to reduce poverty and inequality. My research attempts to identify how to improve the quality of education and reduce inequality and disadvantage. I am currently involved in the pilot of an experimental study to investigate if information and communication technology-assisted teaching can be used to close education gaps for disadvantaged students in poor rural areas in China.”

LES ANCIENS ALUMNI

L'année 2011 fut une excellente année pour la communauté des anciens de l'Institut. Un nouveau Comité, représentant davantage de nationalités, de générations et de secteurs professionnels, a été élu par l'Association. Son rôle est également nouveau ; il sert de conseil à la direction de l'Institut pour la stratégie auprès des anciens. Plusieurs nouveaux chapitres ont été créés. Les activités de l'Association et du Bureau des anciens se sont focalisées sur la recherche d'anciens « perdus de vue » à travers des mailings, l'organisation d'événements et la désignation de « class leaders » qui représentent les volées précédentes.

The year 2011 was exciting for the Graduate Institute Alumni community. A new committee, representing a wider range of nationalities, generations and professional profiles, was elected by the Alumni Association to provide strategic guidance to the Institute's management. Several new chapters were created and the Alumni Association and Alumni Office stepped up outreach activities and were able to connect with numerous Alumni through mailing campaigns, events and the newly designated class leaders who represent previous graduating classes.

LA RECHERCHE RESEARCH

LES DOMAINES PRIORITAIRES PRIORITY AREAS

La recherche à l'Institut est de nature à la fois fondamentale et appliquée. Elle est conduite, d'une part, par les professeurs dans le cadre de leurs travaux individuels et, d'autre part, par des équipes interdisciplinaires qui, au sein des centres et programmes, se consacrent à l'étude d'une série de thématiques prioritaires :

- le commerce international et l'intégration globale ;
- les conflits et la construction de la paix ;
- les migrations et les réfugiés ;
- les enjeux internationaux de l'environnement ;
- la politique internationale de la santé.

Des approches transversales portant sur les questions de genre et sur la gouvernance internationale complètent ces thématiques grâce à deux nouveaux programmes créés en 2011 : le Programme for the Study of International Governance et le Programme on Gender and Global Change.

The Graduate Institute conducts fundamental and applied research. It is carried out by professors as part of their personal work, or by interdisciplinary teams within centres and programmes which are dedicated to the study of a series of priority research topics:

- World trade and global integration;
- Conflict and peacebuilding;
- Migration and refugees;
- International environmental issues;
- International health policy.

The Institute added two programmes which take an interdisciplinary approach to gender and international governance issues in 2011: The Programme for the Study of International Governance and the Programme on Gender and Global Change.

International Governance

Global governance arrangements have decisive implications on various issues. The study of these mechanisms is essential to understand their impact on world affairs. The Graduate Institute offers a number of Master and PhD courses on topics in this area and, in October 2011, it launched a Programme for the Study of International Governance directed by Thomas Biersteker, Curt Gasteyger Professor of International Security and Conflict Studies. The Programme offers a forum for faculty and students to interact with practitioners from the policy world and to analyse global governance across a range of issues. Joseph Deiss, President of the 65th United Nations General Assembly, gave the inaugural lecture on 12 October 2011.

The work of the Programme is focused on three core activities. A visitors' programme offers scholars and practitioners an opportunity to spend up to one year in residence to conduct research on international governance in Geneva.

The Programme also includes two seminar series. The first is intended for scholars to analyse, discuss and critically examine recent theoretical and empirical research on international governance, while the second has been set up for scholars and practitioners from international organisations to explore substantive matters of international governance and reflect on the broader institutional issues and innovative ideas emerging from current research. The first seminar was organised in November 2011. Mr Kassym-Jomart Tokayev, Director-General of the United Nations Office at Geneva, delivered the opening address. Other invited speakers included Andrew Hurrell, Montague Burton Professor of International Relations at Oxford University, and Dr Ijaz Gilani of Gallup Pakistan.

Finally, the programme serves as a hub for research on international governance. Current research includes a project on the impacts and effectiveness of United Nations targeted sanctions, a project on the transnational governance of climate change mitigation efforts, and an investigation into the role of interest groups in shaping international norms.

Gender and Global Change

The impact of global political, economic, environmental, and social changes on women has become a major issue in international affairs. In order to provide a better understanding of this question, the Graduate Institute offers Master and PhD courses on gender that encompass the topics of international organisation, governance, transnational feminism, kinship and property rights, and power. It also organises monthly seminars in which students, faculty, and visitors present their research.

In addition, the Graduate Institute created the Programme on Gender and Global Change headed by Elisabeth Prügl, Deputy Director of the Institute and Professor of International Relations/Political Science, in September 2011. The Programme produces and disseminates research on the workings of gender in development and international relations in order to advance social and gender justice on a global scale. Through its diverse activities, the Programme seeks to provide solutions to pervasive problems of gender injustice, discrimination and exclusion drawing on the tools of social science analysis.

The Programme's research, training, and outreach activities focus on two thematic areas: (a) the transformations of gender resulting from processes of globalisation and development, and (b) the politics of gender in a globally-connected world. The Programme's work is strongly interdisciplinary, drawing insights from the range of social science disciplines taught at the Graduate Institute; it serves as a focal point for gender-related research and teaching. The Programme engages with international, governmental and non-governmental organisations in Geneva as well as with local and international feminist movement groups.

Under its first thematic area, the Programme is examining the significance of gender in current processes of globalisation and development. Building on the foundations laid by the Graduate Institute's Pôle genre et développement, the researchers seek to strengthen their work in three specific areas. First, they are expanding their research on gender in agriculture to investigate the impacts of agricultural policies and international trade liberalisation on rural women in the South, making comparisons and connections to policy approaches in the North. Second, there is a research focus on gender and migration. Third, the Programme is developing research in the area of women, peace, and security with an emphasis on exploring the ways in which gender inequalities and constructions of masculinity contribute to the onset of armed conflict and violence.

Under the aegis of its second thematic area, the Programme examines the efforts of feminist movements, NGOs, governments and intergovernmental bodies to enhance gender equality and justice. There are currently two research foci in this thematic area. The first looks at the international organisation of human reproduction and reproductive rights. The second area of research explores gender politics in international governance with a focus on gender mainstreaming and the role of gender experts in translating feminist ideas into policy interventions.

Trade and Economic Integration

The proximity of the Graduate Institute to the World Trade Organization provides an ideal setting to study and work on international trade. The Institute offers courses in this domain at the Master and PhD levels and brings together renowned specialists who focus on this topic in its international law and international economics departments.

The Centre for Trade and Economic Integration directed by Richard Baldwin, Professor of International Economics, and Joost Pauwelyn, Professor of International Law, is the Institute's centre of excellence for research on international trade. Its mission is to foster world-class scholarship aimed at developing solutions to problems facing the international trade system and economic integration more generally.

Highlights of Research Activities in 2011 Challenges to the WTO-Centric Trade System from Unilateralism and Regionalism (completed project)

Trade liberalisation is proceeding at a rapid pace worldwide. More than one hundred bilateral or regional trade agreements (RTAs) have been concluded since the Doha Round, the current round of multilateral trade talks, was launched a decade ago. Many rapidly industrialising nations have unilaterally lowered their formal trade barriers. Why are nations willing to liberalise unilaterally, bilaterally and regionally, but not multilaterally? And to what extent are regionalism and unilateralism a threat to the WTO-centric trade system? These were the overarching question addressed by Richard Baldwin and a team of researchers.

During this project research by Theresa Carpenter, the Centre's Executive Director, and Andy Lendle, researcher, established that just 16% of world trade enjoys a preference margin, and that those margins are very small. Pierre-Louis Vezina, PhD Candidate, identified competition to attract foreign direct investment from Japan as motivation for "race-to-the-bottom" tariff cutting. Richard Baldwin showed that nations cut tariffs unilaterally because doing so enabled them to join the evolving production networks, gaining investment and jobs.

The key findings led Richard Baldwin to build an argument that, as today's trade is radically more complex, involving "production sharing" and a "trade-investment-service nexus", this 21st century trade demanded deeper disciplines which were supplied by "21st century regionalism" while the WTO was otherwise occupied. This 21st century regionalism has quite different implications for the world trading system than traditional thinking might suggest.

A new research agenda beginning next year will examine the implications of production sharing for trade liberalisation and trade governance.

DISSETTLE (new project)

Trade disputes can be complex, and interpreting what the WTO members have agreed to often involves environmental, cultural, moral and development considerations as well as looking at the legal texts. Economics is sometimes used within a dispute to shed light on questions such as whether or not a particular rule should apply; whether a causal relationship can be inferred; and what should be an appropriate degree of retaliation when an agreement has not been adhered to.

Short for "Dispute Settlement in Trade: Training in Law and Economics", DISSETTLE is an interdisciplinary programme designed to train a new cohort of economic and legal experts to work together in formulating trade policy and settling international trade and investment disputes. With a core goal of crossing the current divide between legal and economic expertise, the DISSETTLE network carries out research on how to make better use of economics and empirical data in the drafting, interpretation and implementation of international trade and investment agreements.

A team led by Joost Pauwelyn won funding for the DISSETTLE project in a competitive submission to the European Unions' Seventh Framework Programme for research.

Conference at the WTO

Conflict, Development and Peacebuilding

Conflict and cooperation are crucial topics in international relations and development studies theory. Committed to a better understanding of these, the Graduate Institute offers a number of courses covering conflicts and peacebuilding. The Institute also conducts research through its Centre on Conflict, Development and Peacebuilding (CCDP) headed by Keith Krause, Professor of International Relations/Political Science. The centre is the Graduate Institute's focal point for research in the areas of conflict analysis, peacebuilding, and the complex relationships between security and development. While building its reputation around scholarly excellence and academic rigour, the CCDP sets itself apart as a "hands on" establishment with a primary focus on interactions with practitioners and field-based research.

In 2011, the CCDP worked on a variety of mandates and initiatives, including:

- Projects on urban violence, together with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) and the University of Manchester.
- Research and knowledge dissemination on civil society and peacebuilding, with a newly developed focus on the Arab Spring in collaboration with the Friedrich-Ebert-Stiftung (FES), the Arab Reform Initiative and the Geneva Centre for Security Policy (GCSP).
- The completion of a global evaluation of the German "Civil Peace Fund", a peacebuilding instrument of the Federal Ministry for Economic Cooperation and Development (BMZ).
- Continuation of a multi-year project on evaluating the impacts and effectiveness of multilateral targeted sanctions.
- An impact evaluation of community-driven development projects for CARE in refugee camps in Chad.
- Research on the impact of resource-dependence and governance on sustainable development, with a particular focus on oil, gas and mineral extraction in middle-income countries.
- Collaboration with the Pakistan Institute of Development Economics (PIDE) in Islamabad on the development of joint research projects and teaching curricula.
- The exploration of possible research projects with local partners in the context of the Framework Agreement between the Swiss Federal Council and the Governments of Bulgaria and Romania.
- The Geneva Peacebuilding Platform, a joint initiative of the CCDP, the GCSP, the Quaker United Nations Office (QUNO) and Interpeace, which seeks to promote discussions and mobilise peacebuilding expertise in Geneva and beyond.
- The Geneva Forum, a joint initiative of the CCDP, the Quaker United Nations Office (QUNO) and the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR), a provider of high-level information and trusted facilitator of constructive discussions in disarmament and arms control processes.

The results of CCDP projects are disseminated via multiple channels including lectures, seminars and practitioner briefings; succinct in-house publications; academic journal articles and special issues; book-length contributions in its Routledge Series on Conflict, Development and Peacebuilding; online databases; and curriculum development for training modules. The CCDP systematically seeks to promote knowledge transfers between research and policy, and to encourage cooperation between Northern and Southern researchers.

Global Migration

In recent years the importance of migration issues in international relations has dramatically increased and the field of migration studies has grown to become a major component of curricula at universities and graduate schools worldwide. Being located in the 'world capital' of migration governance, the Graduate Institute offers advanced courses and dissertation supervision at the Master and PhD level. Its seminars combine theoretical and policy-oriented approaches from a multidisciplinary perspective. Internationally recognised experts provide students with the relevant conceptual approaches and research skills to understand and tackle the multiple challenges and opportunities linked to global migration. Thanks to the presence of the most important international organisations in this field, Geneva as a location constitutes an important asset for researchers.

Global migration is one of the main research priorities of the Graduate Institute. It hosts the Programme for the Study of Global Migration, a research unit headed by Jussi Hanhimäki, professor of International History, that is devoted to the interdisciplinary study of migration linked to armed conflicts, generalised violence, persecution and ecological disasters. It also focuses on the phenomenon of 'economic migration' and its implications.

2011 was an especially important year for the Programme's research on migration-related detention. The Global Detention Project (GDP) increased its research on national detention infrastructures, policies, and practices and expanded its database. It published 11 country reports with a special focus on states in nearby Africa, which is impacted by European immigration policies and the Arab Spring. The GDP also published a special report on detention practices and policies in Switzerland. Moreover, it conducted capacity-building workshops in various regions of the world aimed at mainstreaming data collection and concepts in order to develop a network of actors who cooperate with GDP researchers. Under the direction of Professor Chetail and with funding obtained from the Swiss Network for International Studies, a project on international law and migration detention was also launched in January 2011. It aims at measuring state adherence to international norms relevant to immigration-related detention and assists the GDP in developing new state-level data on laws and practices to complement the existing dataset on detention centres. Finally, reflecting its strong achievements, the GDP recently received an additional two-year grant from Zennström Philanthropies.

The Programme was also active on the international scene in the context of the Global Forum on Migration and Development (GFMD), chaired by Switzerland in 2011. In particular, a Symposium for Civil Society and Governments was organised ahead of the December Forum meeting in Geneva. It contributed to the Swiss Chair's work in offering a space for NGOs and governments to jointly reflect on the 2011 themes, the past and future achievements of the GFMD. The Programme also coordinated the process of drafting recommendations from Swiss NGOs and contributed to the organisation of the GFMD Civil Society Days. This activity raised the Graduate Institute's profile as a player within this international process and allowed it to be strongly associated with the principal organisers, the Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation and the International Catholic Migration Commission. Contributions will continue in 2012, particularly in preparing for the Second High-Level Dialogue on Migration and Development, to be held at the UN General Assembly in 2013.

Environmental Studies

Environmental issues are addressed at the Institute in teaching programmes – at both Master and PhD levels – and also through the activities of the Centre for International Environmental Studies (CIES).

CIES was established in 2010 under the direction of Timothy Swanson, André Hoffmann Chair in Environmental Economics, for the purpose of developing political, legal and economic discourse on problems related to the global environment.

In 2011 the Centre organised a number of events; highlights included:

- The Geneva Environmental Dialogues, a series of public keynote lectures by prominent academics and practitioners. Speakers in 2010 included Carlo Carraro (FEEM), Scott Barrett (Columbia), Catherine Redgwell (University College London), Alan Boyle (Edinburgh) and Robert Stavins (Harvard).
- Protecting the Environment in the XXIst Century: The Role of the Private Sector, a seminar gathering some of the most innovative thinkers in contemporary international environmental law and leading to a book to be published by Cambridge University Press.
- Governing Climate Change Transnationally, an international workshop with scholars from the Graduate Institute, Europe and North America as a contribution to the Transnational Climate Governance research network, (funded by the UK Leverhulme Trust).
- 13th Annual BIOECON Conference on Resource Economics, Biodiversity Conservation and Development, the largest international conference on the economics of conservation and the natural environment, with more than 70 scientific papers (in partnership with IUCN, UNEP, FEEM and Conservation International).
- Designing the Green Economy, an expert workshop organised jointly with the United Nations Environment Programme with leading thinkers from Europe, the US, Brazil and China on the economics of growth, innovation and trade.

CIES leads and participates in a number of externally-funded research projects, covering a wide range of environmental questions. A selection of projects includes:

- Adapting to Adaptation: the Influence of Climate Change Adaptation Discourses and Policies on Local Governance Processes. This Swiss National Science Foundation (SNF) funded project is developing an understanding of how local governance processes and institutions respond or “adapt” to policy discourses on adapting to climate change.
- Governance Entrepreneurs: International Organisations and Public-Private Partnerships. This SNF funded project documents and analyses the rise of global public-private partnerships in the multilateral system (particularly at the World Bank, UNEP, WHO, UNICEF, WTO and the UN Secretariat) and their impact on global governance objectives.
- Global IQ – Impact Quantifications of Global Change. This EC funded project aims to update the Stern Review with a comprehensive assessment of the costs of climate change at national, regional and global scales.

Global Health

The Graduate Institute is particularly well-suited to carry out research and teaching on global health. Its location, Geneva, is the world capital of global health not only due to the presence of the premier organisation focusing on this subject, the World Health Organization, but also because the headquarters of numerous other intergovernmental and non-governmental agencies as well as foundations and partnerships which are dedicated to global health issues are located in the city. The Institute capitalises on this by offering Master and PhD level classes that cover global health, running a joint LL. M. with Georgetown University on Global Health Law and International Institutions, and by having created its Global Health Programme. The Global Health Programme (GHP) is a leading international research programme on health as a global governance challenge and a centre of excellence in global health diplomacy. It is directed by Ilona Kickbusch.

As in previous years, in 2011 the programme carried out executive training in global health diplomacy and provided supervision of Master and PhD candidates at the Institute. In 2011, the GHP also strengthened its focus on applied research. The programme conducted a study on Global governance for health in the 21st century for the WHO Regional Office for Europe. It was prepared for the sixty-first session of the Regional Committee for Europe and is meant to provide input to the formulation of the European policy for health, Health 2020. The study, published by the WHO Regional Office for Europe, calls for a set of policies that reside in sectors other than health and outside of government and gives legitimacy to health ministers to perform new roles in shaping policies to promote wellbeing.

The Programme continued to provide a neutral, academic platform that brings together different stakeholders in International Geneva and that contributes to ongoing policy debates through expert seminars and one-day conferences. 2011 marked the tenth anniversary of the Doha Declaration, and the programme took the opportunity to organise its annual high-level symposium on “The future agenda at the interface of public health, innovation and trade” on 23 November at the World Trade Organization. At the event, Margaret Chan, Director-General of the WHO, Francis Gurry, Director-General of WIPO and Pascal Lamy, Director-General of the WTO, in a dialogue with Ruth Dreifuss, former President of the Swiss Confederation, outlined their perspectives on the main challenges for the future. Other speakers reviewed achievements and challenges in promoting access to medicines and innovation, discussed policy coherence between different international organisations, as well as other key stakeholders, and gave insights into their future impact on a comprehensive work agenda. Other officials who participated included the Executive Directors of UNAIDS, the Global Fund, GAVI Alliance, UNITAID, the International Federation of Pharmaceutical Manufacturers & Associations (IFPMA), the Non-Communicable Disease (NCD) Alliance, and senior officials from the United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO) and MSF, as well as well-known international scholars.

In order to fill the gap in both knowledge and practice of conducting negotiations affecting global health, World Scientific published a book on Negotiating and Navigating Global Health: Case Studies in Global Health Diplomacy edited by Ilona Kickbusch and Ellen Roskam. The book is an important reference for today’s group of “new health diplomats” in the complex technical and political arena of global health diplomacy. It is the starting point of further publications which will be launched in the course of 2012.
