Le mot du directeur

Message from the Director

L'année 2013 a été historique à plus d'un titre. L'emménagement dans la Maison de la paix nous a fait entrer dans une nouvelle ère. Nous avons changé de surface et de relief. Hier dispersée entre des immeubles anonymes et une villa surannée au bord du lac, notre petite institution a pris corps dans une architecture frappante et est devenue, en face de la Maison des étudiants Edgar et Danièle de Picciotto, la porte de Genève et le cœur de la Genève internationale. Nous avons également changé de fonctionnement. De la réunion sous un même toit de la grande majorité des enseignants, des étudiants et des collaborateurs, la formation continue faisant exception (elle occupe la villa Barton), est en train de naître une nouvelle dynamique.

En 2013 encore, nous avons trouvé place dans la législation cantonale, pour la première fois depuis 1927; la Loi sur l'instruction publique nous reconnaît en effet, au même titre que l'Université de Genève, comme une haute école soutenue par l'Etat de Genève. Et nous avons conclu une nouvelle convention d'objectifs quadriennale avec les autorités fédérales et cantonales. Cette convention souligne notre rôle particulier vis-à-vis de la Genève internationale et reconduit notre financement pour les quatre prochaines années.

Au sortir d'un premier cycle qui a vu l'intégration des deux anciens instituts, l'essor de la nouvelle institution et la création du Campus de la paix, nous entrons dans un deuxième cycle. Celui-ci est placé sous le signe du renforcement de notre substance à travers le recrutement d'étudiants et d'enseignants de qualité, la densification de la recherche, l'extension des programmes d'accueil (professeurs invités, chercheurs postdoctoraux, chercheurs en résidence) et l'expansion de notre réseau académique.

Sur ce dernier point, neuf nouveaux partenaires, dont la moitié dans des pays émergents, ont rejoint notre réseau et offrent à nos étudiants de nouvelles possibilités d'échange. Par ailleurs, nous avons établi un programme de double master avec la Kennedy School de Harvard, une première pour les deux institutions.

L'année 2013 s'est donc achevée sur un bilan encourageant. L'Institut dispose à présent de l'infrastructure et des conditions nécessaires à la poursuite de son progrès. Il lui revient de continuer à s'améliorer pour devenir une institution de premier plan dans son domaine de spécialisation.

The year 2013 was historic on many fronts. The Institute's move into the Maison de la paix has brought us into a new era. We have grown in size and stature. Yesterday, spread out between anonymous buildings and an old-fashioned Villa on the lakeside, our small institution has taken shape with striking architecture. With its Maison de la paix and Edgar and Danièle de Picciotto Student House straddling the entrance into the city, it has become a gateway to the city and the heart of International Geneva. We have also changed the way we function. By bringing together under one roof the majority of our faculty, students and personnel, with the exception of Executive Education (located in Villa Barton), a new dynamic is being created.

Also in 2013, our status was anchored in the State of Geneva's legislation for the first time since the Institute's beginnings in 1927; the law on public education now recognises the Institute, on par with the University of Geneva, as an institution of higher education supported by the State of Geneva. In addition, we concluded a new four-year convention d'objectifs with the federal and cantonal authorities. This convention highlights our special role towards International Geneva and renews our funding for the next four years.

Having completed the first phase of our transformation which witnessed the merger of the two predecessor institutes, the rise of the new institution and the creation of the Campus de la paix, we are entering into a second phase. This phase will be defined by the reinforcement of our substance through recruiting excellent students and faculty, densifying our research, extending our welcoming programmes (visiting professors, post-docs, researchers-in-residence), and expanding our academic network.

Nine new partners, half of which are from emerging countries, have joined this network, providing our students new exchange opportunities. Moreover, we have created a dual Master degree programme with the Harvard Kennedy School, a first for both institutions.

The year 2013 has thus finished on an encouraging note. The Institute now has the infrastructure and the conditions necessary to pursue its rise. We will continue on our path of constant improvement so as to become a top institution in our field of specialisation.

Au cœur de la Genève internationale

In the Heart of International Geneva

L'Institut et la Genève internationale ont partie liée depuis l'établissement de la Société des Nations au sortir de la Première Guerre mondiale.

Créé quelques années plus tard, en 1927, l'Institut fut la première institution au monde consacrée entièrement à l'étude des affaires internationales – la Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Studies de Princeton et la Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy de l'Université Tufts naquirent au début de la décennie suivante. En 1961 fut créé, sous l'impulsion de Jacques Freymond, l'Institut d'études du développement (sous le nom d'Institut africain), une autre institution pionnière dans son domaine. En 2008, les deux instituts se sont réunis en plaçant sous un même toit les relations internationales et les études du développement et en intégrant de manière novatrice les perspectives et les sensibilités du Nord et du Sud.

Le rôle particulier de l'Institut vis-à-vis de la Genève internationale a été réaffirmé en 2013 dans la législation genevoise et dans la nouvelle convention d'objectifs conclue avec les autorités publiques. L'emménagement dans la Maison de la paix permet aujourd'hui d'assumer pleinement ce rôle en tissant des liens plus étroits encore avec les experts de la Genève internationale, que ce soit pour l'enseignement, la recherche, la formation continue ou les manifestations publiques.

La cohabitation au sein de la Maison de la paix avec les trois centres soutenus par la Confédération helvétique – le Centre pour le contrôle démocratique des forces armées (DCAF), le Centre international de déminage humanitaire (GICHD) et le Centre de politique de sécurité (GCSP) – permet, en outre, de renforcer la thématique «paix et sécurité» et d'en faire l'un des points forts de la Genève internationale.

The Graduate Institute and International Geneva have shared close ties since the establishment of the League of Nations in the wake of the First World War.

Created a few years later, in 1927, the Institute was the first institution in the world dedicated entirely to the study of international affairs – the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Studies at Princeton and the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University were opened at the end of the following decade. In 1961, the Institute of Development Studies (then named the African Institute), another pioneer in its field, was created under the guidance of Jacques Freymond. In 2008, the two institutes merged bringing together the study of international relations and development under one roof and at the same time integrating a new perspective on the complexities of North-South relations.

The Institute's special role in International Geneva was reaffirmed in 2013 in Geneva cantonal legislation and in the new convention d'objectifs concluded with the public authorities. Moving into the Maison de la paix has allowed the Institute to fully concentrate on this role while further strengthening its ties with International Geneva's experts through teaching, research, executive education and public events.

The Institute's home, the Maison de la paix also houses three centres supported by the Swiss Confederation – the Geneva Centre for the Democratic Control of Armed Forces (DCAF), the Geneva International Centre for Humanitarian Demining (GICHD), and the Geneva Centre for Security and Policy (GCSP) – and provides a significant contribution to the field of peace and security, reinforcing International Geneva's role in that field.

A Genève et en Suisse

In Geneva and Switzerland

L'Institut bénéficie depuis des décennies du soutien de l'Etat de Genève et de la Confédération helvétique. Il doit ce soutien à sa contribution

- à la production scientifique mondiale
- au rayonnement international de Genève
- et aux relations extérieures de la Suisse

Ce soutien de longue durée s'explique par la coïncidence des identités et des intérêts. Les activités de l'Institut s'accordent parfaitement avec l'«esprit de Genève», nourri de la mémoire de l'exil huguenot, du rôle de capitale humanitaire après la création du Comité international de la Croix-Rouge et de la tradition d'accueil d'organisations internationales depuis la Société des Nations.

Avec la politique extérieure de la Suisse, l'Institut partage des orientations fondamentales : la primauté du droit, notamment du droit humanitaire et des droits de l'homme ; l'importance de la coopération internationale et de l'aide au développement ; de manière générale, la nécessité d'un monde ouvert et libre. En valorisant le respect de la diversité et la recherche de solutions pragmatiques, l'Institut s'inscrit, en outre, dans une culture politique qui est caractéristique de la Suisse et représente l'un des meilleurs apports de ce pays à la pratique des relations internationales.

Au-delà de son expertise sur les thématiques-clés de la Genève internationale, l'Institut contribue directement aux relations extérieures de la Suisse par l'action de ses anciens étudiants dans l'administration fédérale (Département fédéral des affaires étrangères, Secrétariat d'Etat à l'économie, Banque nationale suisse, etc.) et la réalisation d'un nombre substantiel de contrats de recherche appliquée (voir p. 32-33). Depuis 2012, l'Institut est lié par un accord-cadre avec le Département fédéral des affaires étrangères, qui met en valeur son rôle d'institut suisse de formation aux carrières internationales et de centre suisse d'expertise sur les affaires mondiales.

Par la qualité de ses ressources et de son réseau, l'Institut est bien équipé pour servir d'interlocuteur académique de la Genève internationale et soutenir la position de la Suisse

- en formant de futurs acteurs internationaux qui seront à travers le monde des ambassadeurs de bonne volonté pour Genève et la Suisse
- en fournissant à la communauté internationale une expertise sur les principaux défis du monde contemporain
- en offrant un perfectionnement professionnel à un large éventail de personnes actives dans l'arène internationale
- en jouant le rôle de plateforme de dialogue et de concertation entre acteurs internationaux de tout type

For several decades, the Institute has benefitted from the support of the State of Geneva and the Swiss Confederation. It receives this support thanks to contributions

- for the production of international scientific knowledge
- for the reputation and influence of International Geneva
- and for Switzerland's foreign relations

This long-term support is a testament to shared identities and interests. The Institute's activities are well in line with the "spirit of Geneva", which has its origins in the exile of the French Protestant Huguenots, culminating in Geneva becoming a humanitarian capital with the creation of the International Committee of the Red Cross and its tradition of hosting numerous international organisations since the birth of the League of Nations.

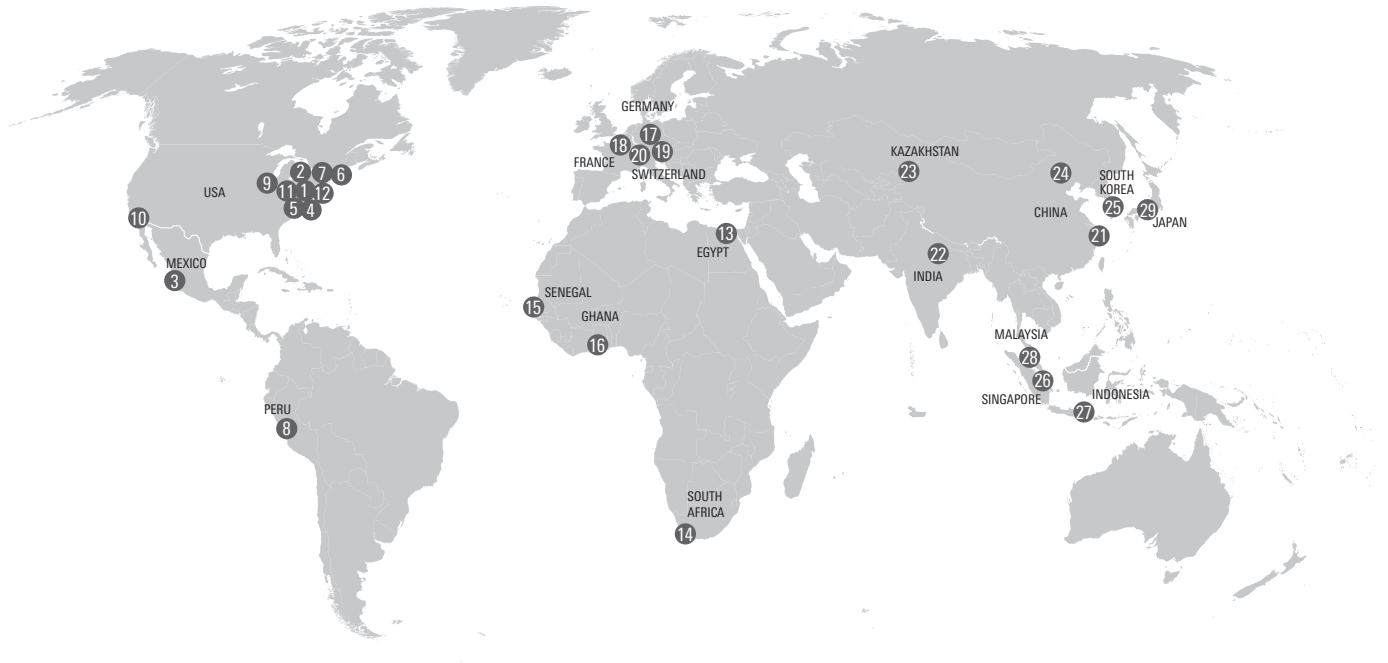

The Institute shares the fundamental objectives of Switzerland's foreign policy: the rule of law, notably humanitarian and human rights law; the importance of international cooperation and development assistance; and in general, the need for an open and free world. By incorporating the respect for diversity and the search for pragmatic solutions, the Institute shares the values of the political culture that is characteristic of Switzerland and represents one of the country's best contributions to the practice of international relations.

Beyond its expertise in International Geneva's key areas of specialisation, the Institute contributes directly to Switzerland's foreign policy through the endeavours of its alumni who work in the Swiss Federal administration (Federal Department of Foreign Affairs, State Secretariat for Economic Affairs, Swiss National Bank, etc.) and by carrying out a substantial amount of commissioned applied research (see p. 32-33). Since 2012, the Institute has had a framework agreement with the Federal Department of Foreign Affairs, which strengthens its role as a Swiss institution dedicated to preparing students for international careers and as a Swiss centre of expertise on world affairs.

Through the quality of its resources and network, the Institute is well equipped to carry out its role as International Geneva's academic partner and to contribute to Switzerland's influence by

- training future international actors who will be ambassadors of the goodwill of Geneva and Switzerland and who will be based all over the world
- providing expertise on the main challenges facing today's world to the international community
- offering professional training to a wide range of people active in the international arena
- serving as a platform for dialogue between international actors of all kinds

En Suisse et dans le monde

In Switzerland and the World

L'Institut est présent en Suisse et dans le monde à travers

- le recrutement de ses étudiants
- les réseaux de ses enseignants et chercheurs
- le réseau de ses anciens
- ses activités de formation continue
- ses partenaires académiques

Le réseau académique de l'Institut comprend des partenaires en Suisse et dans le monde. En Suisse, l'Institut participe activement au Réseau suisse pour les études internationales à Genève (SNIS), qu'il a créé avec l'Université de Genève et qui a pour mission de promouvoir la recherche dans ce domaine d'études. Les autres membres sont le World Trade Institute (Université de Berne), le Centre for Comparative and International Studies (Université de Zurich et Ecole polytechnique fédérale de Zurich), l'Institut tropical suisse (Université de Bâle) et le Swiss Institute for International Economics and Applied Economic Research (Université de Saint-Gall).

Avec l'Université de Genève, l'Institut entretient des relations soutenues, comme en témoignent notamment plusieurs centres et programmes conjoints : l'Académie de droit international humanitaire et de droits humains (Geneva Academy), le LL.M. en règlement international des différends (MIDS) et le Centre d'enseignement et de recherche en action humanitaire (CERAH). L'Institut a également des accords de collaboration avec l'Université de Saint-Gall et le Centre for Comparative and International Studies susmentionné.

Dans le monde, l'Institut a développé un réseau de partenaires sur tous les continents. De huit en 2007, leur nombre est passé à 29 en 2013 ; neuf nouveaux accords ont été signés au cours de cette dernière année. Outre la recherche d'une couverture géographique aussi large que possible, la priorité est donnée aux pays émergents, le réservoir démographique de l'humanité.

La fonction principale de ce réseau a été jusqu'à présent d'offrir à nos étudiants l'occasion de passer un semestre chez un partenaire et d'accueillir des étudiants de nos partenaires. Ainsi, les uns et les autres peuvent faire l'expérience d'une culture universitaire différente et d'un autre milieu culturel tout en avançant dans leur projet de recherche personnel.

Depuis 2013, l'Institut ajoute à ce réseau un petit cercle d'institutions avec lesquelles il souhaite nouer des liens plus étroits, qui prennent notamment la forme de programmes de diplômes conjoints ou doubles. C'est ainsi qu'a été signé en 2013 un accord avec la Kennedy School, qui s'ajoute à celui existant avec la Law School de Harvard. Il établit un programme de double master permettant à l'Institut d'augmenter ses capacités et son rayonnement.

The Institute is present in Switzerland and globally, through

- the recruitment of its students
- the networks of its faculty and researchers
- its network of alumni
- its Executive Education activities
- its academic partners

The Institute's academic network is made up of partners in Switzerland and throughout the world. In Switzerland, the Institute participates actively in the Swiss Network for International Studies (SNIS), which it created with the University of Geneva to promote research in its area of specialisation. The other members of SNIS are the World Trade Institute (University of Bern), the Centre for Comparative and International Studies (University of Zurich and the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology in Zurich), the Swiss Tropical Institute (University of Basel), and the Swiss Institute for International Economics and Applied Economic Research (University of St. Gallen).

The Institute shares longstanding ties with the University of Geneva, which have taken shape through the creation of several joint centres and programmes: the Academy of International Humanitarian Law and Human Rights (the Geneva Academy), the LL.M. in International Dispute Settlement (MIDS) and the Centre for Training and Research in Humanitarian Action (CERAH). It has also concluded collaboration agreements with the University of St. Gallen and the above mentioned Centre for Comparative and International Studies.

Throughout the world, the Institute has developed a network of partners on all continents. From eight in 2007, their number grew to 29 in 2013 with nine new agreements signed during the course of last year. In addition to being represented in as many countries as possible, the Institute strives in particular to create partnerships in emerging countries.

Until now, the principal purpose of this network has been to provide our students with the opportunity to study for a semester at a partner institution and to host students from these schools. With a view to providing both groups a rich experience in a diverse academic and cultural setting, this also allows them to pursue a personal research project.

Since 2013, the Institute has added a small group of institutions to this network, with whom it intends to build stronger ties by creating joint or dual diploma programmes. In 2013, the Institute signed an agreement establishing a dual Master degree programme with the Kennedy School, adding to its existing partnership with Harvard's Law School, strengthening the Institute's programme offering and outreach.

L'enseignement Teaching

L'Institut offre des programmes d'études disciplinaires et interdisciplinaires. Cette double offre, qui s'ajoute au large éventail des disciplines représentées (anthropologie, droit, économie, histoire, science politique, sociologie), fait l'une de ses originalités, le champ des affaires mondiales étant rarement approché de manière aussi riche et complète.

Les étudiants peuvent du coup choisir, au sortir d'une première formation, entre un approfondissement disciplinaire et un élargissement interdisciplinaire. Même dans le premier cas, la pluridisciplinarité est encouragée. Au niveau du master, les étudiants doivent suivre des enseignements dans une seconde discipline. Au niveau du doctorat, ils ont la possibilité de faire leur thèse dans deux disciplines, l'une choisie comme « majeure », l'autre comme « mineure », et d'obtenir un diplôme qui atteste ce caractère bidisciplinaire. Les étudiants peuvent également effectuer, sous certaines conditions, un parcours complet master-doctorat en cinq ans au lieu de six.

L'enseignement à l'Institut est exigeant et obéit à des critères stricts de qualité. Il se caractérise par une forte interaction entre étudiants et enseignants dans des classes de petite taille, l'importance donnée au travail personnel, un bilinguisme qui laisse à chacun la liberté de s'exprimer en anglais ou en français et, enfin, un souci des débouchés professionnels des étudiants, dont témoignent l'actualisation régulière du curriculum et l'encouragement à effectuer des stages, à participer à des ateliers de compétence et à faire des travaux appliqués utiles à une carrière internationale.

The Institute offers disciplinary and interdisciplinary study programmes. This dual approach in addition to the wide range of disciplines offered (anthropology, economics, history, law, political science, sociology) represents one of its unique characteristics; the field of international studies is rarely approached in such a broad and comprehensive manner.

Upon completion of their first degree, incoming students can choose between studying their own discipline in greater depth or opting for interdisciplinary studies. In the case of the first option, interdisciplinarity is still encouraged. When studying for a Master, students are required to achieve a certain number of credits in a second discipline. PhD students have the option of writing their thesis in two disciplines, one as their "major" and the second as their "minor". The diploma reflects the bi-disciplinary nature of their doctorate. A fast track also gives students, under certain conditions, the opportunity to complete their Master and PhD in five years instead of six.

Studying at the Institute is demanding and requires students to adhere to high standards of quality. It involves close interaction between students and faculty in small teaching groups, a strong emphasis on personal work, and a bilingual policy allowing everyone to express themselves in either English or French. Close attention to career perspectives means that the curriculum is regularly updated and students are encouraged to undertake internships, participate in workshops and engage in work experiences relevant to an international career.

ADVANCING DEVELOPMENT GOALS – INTERNATIONAL CONTEST FOR GRADUATE STUDENTS

In 2013, the Institute launched an international competition for graduate students entitled “Advancing Development Goals” whose objective is to stimulate debate on the future of the global development agenda. The subject of the 2014 competition is “Empowering Women for Development” with an emphasis on social, political and economic inclusion. A jury chaired by Ambassador Staehelin and composed of high level figures, will select three papers and invite the student teams to Geneva for a one-day defense of their proposal. The winning project will receive a prize of CHF 10,000. The second prize will be CHF 5,000 and the third prize CHF 2,500.

We owe both the initiative and the funding to Mr Jenö Staehelin, former Swiss Ambassador to the United Nations and a longtime friend of the Graduate Institute.

During his studies he was awarded the Prize Lectureship in International Studies and the Starr Lectureship in Anthropology, having taught on resource extraction and the global economy, the anthropology of corporations, and social theory. His most recent publications have focused on corporate mining and the semiotic qualities of diamond trading in Angola. His previous work focused on medieval history, modern European colonialism, and late imperialism in Africa, having conducted research in Portugal, Mozambique, and Angola. A Master in Anthropology, also from Chicago, a degree in Anthropology, colonial and postcolonial studies, and a Bachelor's degree in History from Universidade Nova de Lisboa, round out Dr Calvão's education. He has been a visiting scholar and affiliated researcher at the Universidade Estadual de Campinas, Brazil, and at Brown University in the United States.

→ AIDAN RUSSELL

Assistant Professor, International History
PhD, University of Oxford

Aidan Russell completed his DPhil in History at Oxford University. His thesis explored the history of Burundi's northern border with Rwanda across its first postcolonial decade, up to the "selective genocide" of 1972. Prior to his arrival in Geneva he was elected to a Title A research fellowship at Trinity College, Cambridge. His current research focuses on the emergence of the Great Lakes region of Africa through the tumult of the 1960s and 1970s. A matter of ambiguous regional integration prompted by internal crises, border conflicts, the movement of vast numbers of refugees and the cooperation of transnational rebel groups, this understudied period of history holds much vital importance for the understanding of subsequent developments in the region today.

Professor of Development Economics

→ SUSANNA CAMPBELL

Researcher at the Institute's Center for Conflict, Development and Peacebuilding

Funded by the Swiss Network for International Studies (SNIS)

International relations and policy literature on peacebuilding argues that donors must design international aid programmes based on local reality. If aid is not relevant, it is not likely to alter the causes of conflict and may, in fact, undermine the peace process. For donors to influence the peace process they have to anticipate and respond to its key turning points, and their power to act might be hindered due to incompatible headquarter-imposed timeframes and priorities.

This project employs an innovative multi-method research design to answer these questions, comparing the behavior of different types of donors in three peace processes: Liberia, Nepal, and Sudan.

Red Revolution: The Emergence of Stem Cell Biotechnologies in India

→ ADITYA BHARADWAJ

Researcher Professor

Funded by the European Research Council (ERC)

The biotechnological landscape in India can be conceptually demarcated as green and red. The post-independence, state supported rise of green agricultural biotechnologies – heralding the fabled green revolution – is well documented. Less well understood is the recent rise of red bio-technologies and moves to engineer a red revolution of health care based on human tissues and biogenetic substance.

This project analyses the interplay between state, citizens and consumers, and emerging markets in human stem cell technologies in India, developments that pose profound bioethical and political questions. The research examines the emerging research/therapy interface with a view to explicating the high risk and high gain production of stem cell biotechnologies in India. It will produce an in-depth multi-sited ethnographic mapping of the stem cell terrain in India.

Impact of International Investment Agreements and Arbitration on Governance in Argentina, Czech Republic, India and Mexico

→ ZACHARY DOUGLAS

Associate Professor of International Law

→ SHALINI RANDERIA

Professor of Anthropology and Sociology of Development

Funded by the Swiss National Science Foundation (SNSF)

This project examines the impact of international investment treaties on governance. It seeks to understand whether these treaties contribute to an increased observance of the rule of law and an improvement in the quality of domestic institutions, as the conventional narrative goes, or whether the treaties in fact contribute to regulatory chill such that legitimate and necessary reforms are not pursued due to fear of provoking expensive international litigation.

A selected number of case studies on the workings of investment treaties and disputes in four countries will be analysed using qualitative methods. Interviews will be conducted with government officials, lawyers, members of NGOs and civil society, as well as journalists, in order to understand how international investment treaties and arbitration create and influence domestic policy and decision-making.

International Investment Arbitration: Neo-liberal Straightjacket, Promoter of Domestic and International Rule of Law, Both or Neither?

→ CÉDRIC DUPONT

Professor of Political Science and International Relations

Funded by the Swiss National Science Foundation (SNF)

Investment arbitrations remained rare, with less than five a year, for more than two decades after the first case in 1972 but started to rise in the mid-1990s. This rise accelerated in the 2000s with yearly arbitrations reaching close to 35 cases each year since 2009. In total, there have been more than 550 arbitration claims (both treaty-based and contract-based) since 1972.

This project adopts a mixed methodological approach, combining quantitative methods using a dataset on the more than 550 claims to date, as well as case studies. It traces decision-making processes by host states and investors with regard to arbitrations and threats of arbitrations, looks at their potential effect on public policy, and assesses the functions that investment arbitration actually fulfills as opposed to its originally intended functions.

MACROHIST – Macroeconomics and Financial History

→ MARC FLANDREAU

Professor of International History and International Economics

Funded by the European Union (EU)

The economic and financial crisis that began in 2007 has renewed interest in the state of economics and economic training which both graduate and undergraduate students are receiving. Employers in both the private and public sectors are arguing for a change in the way young macroeconomists are trained to enable a better understanding of how the financial system actually works as well as appropriate policies in times of financial crises.

MACROHIST is based on a network of seven leading European academic and research institutions, led by the Graduate Institute, and focuses on training to improve knowledge of economic and financial history. Major discontinuities in economic performance and economic policy regimes have occurred repeatedly in the past and may therefore occur again in the future, often coinciding with economic and financial crises which cannot be assumed away as theoretically impossible.

Bad Behaviour? Explaining Performance in International Peacebuilding Organisations

→ STEPHANIE HOFMANN

Associate Professor of International Relations/Political Science

→ SUSANNA CAMPBELL

Researcher at the Institute's Center for Conflict, Development and Peacebuilding (CCDP)

Funded by the Swiss National Science Foundation (SNF)

Existing scholarship has generally focused on the failure of international organisations (IOs), international non-governmental organisations (INGOs) and bilateral donors to achieve their peacebuilding aims. This project, by contrast, suggests that the puzzle lies in why these organisations sometimes achieve their transformative aims in conflict-torn societies, and therefore focuses on the possibility of successful peacebuilding operations.

The premise of this project is that IOs, INGOs and bilateral donors, at times, make important contributions to the negotiation and implementation of peace agreements, not just by providing money but sometimes by implementing targeted, nuanced and highly adaptable interventions.

The analysis sheds light on the effectiveness of current peacebuilding policies and tools and presents a framework that international peacebuilding actors can use to assess and improve their performance. The findings will also contribute to the theoretical debates within international relations on the performance, accountability, legitimacy, informal governance, and change processes of international security and development institutions.

Civil-Military Relations and the Dynamics of the Revolution: Tunisia's Security Sector from a Historical Perspective

→ KEITH KRAUSE

Professor of Political Science/International Relations

Funded by the Swiss National Science Foundation (SNF)

Research on the "Arab Spring" in Tunisia and other countries has analysed the sources and dynamics of popular social mobilisation by focusing on elections, political parties, civil society and the private sector. The impact of the security and armed forces on the formation and transformation of the postcolonial state in the Arab world has largely been neglected.

This project addresses this gap and postulates that the unfolding of the uprisings, including the popular mobilisation and success or failure of regime overthrow, and the dynamics of the ensuing revolutionary transition, are shaped by a highly complex relationship between the security sector and state institutions, the political process and society.

Ethnic Differentiation, Interethnic Relations and Conflict in Central Asia: The Case of the Uzbeks in Kyrgyzstan, Afghanistan, Tajikistan and Kazakhstan

→ ALESSANDRO MONSUTTI

Associate Professor of Anthropology and Sociology of Development

→ PETER FINKE

Ethnologisches Seminar, the University of Zurich

→ GÜNTHER SCHLEE

Max Planck Institute for Social Anthropology

Funded by the Swiss National Science Foundation (SNF)

This project examines processes of ethnic differentiation and interethnic relations in four states where Uzbeks form a significant minority. Three of them, namely Afghanistan, Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan, have in recent years experienced conflicts of varying scale in which Uzbeks have been involved. Kazakhstan, spared from serious interethnic tensions, serves as a control case.

Conflict patterns and political mobilisation will be compared, looking at when, why and how ethnic differentiation becomes relevant for social and political action, how this is shaped by national politics and resource distribution, and social networks on the ground. The impact of state politics and local identity concepts on interethnic relations and their mobilisation will be analysed by comparing Uzbek communities in different locations where violence has erupted or not.

Reassessing the End of the Cold War: Western Interventionism in the “Arc of Crisis” and Africa, from the Mid-1970s to the Early 1990s

→ JUSSI HANHIMÄKI

Professor of International History

Funded by the Swiss National Science Foundation (SNF)

The dominant historiography of the last decades of the Cold War has depicted the 1970s as a period of Western decline and retreat. In contrast, the 1980s witnessed the “reaction” of the West that ultimately led to the crumbling of the Soviet Union and the post-Cold War era of Western primacy.

This research aims to challenge these views in three ways: 1) by reassessing major Western interventionist policies during the second half of the 1970s and asking whether the sense of pervasive decline and crisis reflected reality; 2) by connecting the policies of the 1980s to those of the 1970s to unveil continuities in Western interventionism in strategic developing countries; and 3) by evaluating the extent to which these Western interventions shaped the international system and set the stage for the post-Cold War era.

Diffusion of Clean Energy Technology for Green Economy in Developing Countries

- LILIANA ANDONOVA, Professor of Political Science and International Relations
- JOËLLE NOAILLY, Marie Curie Fellow affiliated to the Centre for International Environment Studies

Funded by the Swiss Network for International Studies (SNIS)

While developed countries are trying to operate the transition from carbon-oriented to clean energy consumption, developing countries still face obstacles. Traditional economic theory argues that developing countries may simply adopt technologies produced elsewhere, but there are market and policy barriers which prevent this.

This project aims to identify these obstacles and assess which procedures at the governance level will help facilitate clean technology diffusion. The research will also identify best practices to reinforce the institutional capacity of developing countries to adopt clean technologies.

GREENSPILL – The Role of Multinational Firms in the Diffusion of Green Technologies to Developing Countries

- TIMOTHY SWANSON, Professor of International Economics
- JOËLLE NOAILLY, Marie Curie Fellow affiliated to the Centre for International Environment Studies

Funded by the European Union (EU)

As greenhouse gas emissions from developing countries overtake those of developed countries, this project provides empirical evidence on the role of multinationals in green technology transfers, an area largely unexplored to date, builds bridges between well-established international trade and environmental economics methodologies, and provides policy implications and recommendations.

The research looks at the number of foreign green patents invented in developing countries, how much and why multinationals conduct green research and development outside their home country, and the impact of technology transfers by multinationals on the energy productivity of receiving countries.

Governance Entrepreneurs, International Organisations and Public-Private Partnerships

→ LILIANA ANDONOVA

Professor of International Relations/Political Science

Funded by the Swiss National Science Foundation (SNF)

This project explains the rise of global public-private partnerships in the multilateral system and their impact on global governance objectives. It will highlight the critical role of international organisations as entrepreneurs rather than just takers of institutional change. It will do so by providing an encompassing and theoretically-informed analysis of global public-private partnerships and the interplay between intergovernmental institutions and their networks. A database of public-private-partnerships across several international organisations (World Bank, UNEP, WHO, UNICEF, WTO, and the UN Secretariat) will be constructed as part of the project, and will furthermore provide a basis for additional research and social scientific inquiry on the governance dynamics and effects of public-private collaboration.

The Adoption of Clean Energy Technologies in South Africa: The Costs to Adopting Technology Restrictions

→ TIMOTHY SWANSON

Professor of International Economics

→ MARE STARR

University of Cape Town

Funded by the Swiss National Science Foundation (SNF)

This project examines the cost implications of shifting towards new energy technologies and the societal interventions required, using South Africa as a case study. With an abundant supply of low-cost coal powering growing domestic energy requirements and foreign export earnings, restricting coal in favour of alternative technologies in South Africa could have large economic and societal implications.

This project will examine the economic role of coal and state interventions necessary for alternative sources of energy. It will assess the costs to the South African economy if restrictions on the use of coal were to be introduced and the macroeconomic implications of shifting between technologies, both in terms of sectoral shifts and distributive impacts.

LES CONTRATS D'EXPERTISE

EXPERTISE CONTRACTS

A côté de la recherche de type fondamentale, l'Institut accomplit des contrats d'expertise ou de recherche appliquée pour un certain nombre de gouvernements et d'organisations internationales.

Il effectue en particulier pour le gouvernement suisse – principalement le Département fédéral des affaires étrangères (DFAE), la Direction du développement et de la coopération (DDC) et le Secrétariat d'Etat à l'économie (SECO) – toute une série de contrats qui vont de la recherche appliquée (Bilateral Assistance and Capacity Building for Central Banks, Small Arms Survey) à la gestion de plateformes internationales (Geneva Forum, Geneva Peacebuilding Platform, Network for International Policies and Cooperation in Education and Training – NORRAG) et à la réalisation de programmes de formation continue (voir p. 38-41).

In addition to traditional academic research, the Institute provides commissioned expertise and applied research for a number of governments and international organisations.

For the Swiss government (mainly the Department of Foreign Affairs, the Agency for Development Cooperation and the Secretariat for Economic Affairs), the Institute has been mandated to carry out applied research (Bilateral Assistance and Capacity Building for Central Banks, Small Arms Survey) and to manage international platforms (the Geneva Forum, the Geneva Peacebuilding Platform, NORRAG) as well as to conduct Executive Education programmes (see p. 38–41).

Bilateral Assistance and Capacity Building for Central Banks

→ CÉDRIC TILLE, Director, Professor of International Economics

Funded by the Swiss State Secretariat for Economic Affairs (SECO)

This programme builds on the Graduate Institute's longstanding expertise in providing tailored technical assistance to partner countries. The programme supports the development of research skills in partner institutions with coaching by Institute faculty, as well as providing researchers the opportunity to spend a semester at the Institute.

Synergies are developed through an annual conference and regional workshops that bring together high level academics, policy-makers and senior figures from central banks. The 2013 annual conference, "Setting up the Monetary Policy Framework: What Role for Financial Sector Considerations", was held jointly with SECO in Geneva. The 2013 regional conference, "Managing Policy Spillovers in Developed Countries, Capital Flows and Policy Challenges in emerging Markets", was organised by the Central Bank of Peru.

The Small Arms Survey

→ KEITH KRAUSE, Director, Professor of International Relations/Political Science

→ ERIC BERMAN, Managing Director

Funded by the Swiss Federal Department of Foreign Affairs and the Agency for Development and Cooperation, along with long-standing or current support from Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, Germany, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Spain, Sweden, the United Kingdom, and the United States

The unchecked spread of small arms and light weapons has exacerbated conflicts and human rights violations, undermined political and economic development, destabilised communities, and devastated the lives of millions. Accurate information on the global flow of these weapons and reliable analyses of the causes and consequences of their proliferation are crucial for governments, policy-makers, analysts and activists.

Established in 1999, the Small Arms Survey is the principal international source of impartial and public information on all aspects of small arms and armed violence. It also acts as an independent monitor of national and international governmental and non-governmental policy initiatives, an outlet for policy-relevant research, a forum and clearinghouse for the sharing of information as well as the dissemination of best practice measures and initiatives.

Funded by different institutions including the Swiss Federal Department of Foreign Affairs (DFAE), the Irish Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade, and the Friedrich-Ebert-Stiftung

This unique partnership of a research institution, an NGO and an autonomous UN body works to facilitate dialogue on disarmament, arms control, peace and security, with the aim of promoting progress towards a more secure world. The project hosts a broad variety of public activities aiming to sensitise disarmament practitioners to new and emerging security issues and to help build policy-relevant agendas around them; to facilitate implementation of disarmament and arms control agreements; and to contribute to disarmament and arms control negotiations. In its work, the Geneva Forum involves all stakeholder communities, interacting on a daily basis with government agencies and diplomatic missions, UN bodies, international and regional organisations, NGOs, and think tanks. Finally, the project strives to promote holistic perspectives, enhancing dialogue and communication between the disarmament, development, human rights, humanitarian, and public health communities.

Centre for International Environmental Studies

→ TIMOTHY SWANSON

Co-Director, Professor of International Economics and André Hoffmann Chair in Environmental Economics

→ LILIANA ANDONOVA

Co-Director, Professor of International Relations/Political Science

The Centre is dedicated to developing scholarly discourse on global environmental challenges.

In 2013, the Centre launched an Innovation and Green Growth Programme (see p. 30), a three-year programme addressing how economic growth can synchronise with environmental objectives. The programme, which brings together academics, doctoral students, and policy-makers with the new multilateral Green Growth Knowledge Platform, has been funded through research councils (EU, SNF, SNIS), with four distinct awards totalling more than CHF 2.5 million.

The project Governance Entrepreneurs, International Organisations and Public-Private Partnerships received renewed support from SNF to continue researching the rise of global public-private partnerships in the multilateral system and their impact on global governance objectives.

The Centre co-organised the 15th annual BIOECON Conference in Cambridge, United Kingdom, with the London School of Economics and Political Science, addressing frontier research issues in environmental and agricultural economics. The Centre also organised a symposium on the Rio Declaration on Environment and Development.

The Centre became a knowledge partner of the Green Growth Knowledge Platform, a new initiative with the OECD, UNEP, the World Bank and the Global Green Growth Institute, to disseminate research work to policy-makers and experts in a range of organisations.

Centre for Trade and Economic Integration

→ RICHARD BALDWIN

Co-Director, Professor of International Economics

→ JOOST PAUWELYN

Co-Director, Professor of International Law

The Centre for Trade and Economic Integration fosters world-class multidisciplinary scholarship aimed at developing solutions to problems facing the world trade system broadly defined and economic integration more generally. In doing so, it makes the Graduate Institute a global hub for the study of trade and economic integration policy issues.

Key activities during 2013 included a two-day conference held at the World Trade Organisation (WTO) exploring Asian perspectives on the future of the world trading system and four research workshops focusing on international settlement of trade and investment disputes.

The Summer Lecture examined the tobacco industry's challenge to governments as new attempts are made to regulate this dangerous but legal product.

The Trade and Investment Law Clinic, now in its fourth year, considered questions such as the international treaty implications if the United Kingdom were to withdraw from the European Union, and the legality of sophisticated tax planning by multinational enterprises aimed at shifting profits in ways that erode the taxable base and lead to significant losses of national tax revenues.

The Centre worked closely with the WTO to host the OIKOS Model WTO, a simulation of trade negotiations; and the final round of the European Law Students' Association Moot Court (ELSA Moot Court), a mock WTO trial, in Geneva.

Global Migration Centre

→ VINCENT CHETAIL

Director, Professor of International Law

In 2013, the Programme for the Study of Global Migration became the Global Migration Centre, enabling deeper relations with academic and policy communities. The Centre welcomed François Crépeau (UN Special Rapporteur on the Human Rights of Migrants) as Visiting Scholar and organised two major events: a preparatory conference for the UN High Level Dialogue on Migration and Development, and a News Briefing on the conditions faced by migrant workers in Qatar.

In terms of research activities, 18 articles were published along with three Global Migration Research Papers. In collaboration with the International Organization for Migration, the Centre launched an Applied Research Seminar. Finally, the Centre was awarded funding for six research projects (SNIS, SNF and the Federal Department of Foreign Affairs) including the project Time to Look at Girls: Adolescent Girls Migration and Development that explores the links between migration of adolescent girls and development in the Global South.

Global Health Programme

→ ILONA KICKBUSCH

Director, Associate Professor

The Global Health Programme focuses on global governance for health and global health diplomacy within International Geneva and beyond, linking and working in collaboration with a number of research centres, think-tanks, universities, international organisations and a group of distinguished senior fellows.

In 2013, the Programme focused on commissioned research studies, geared towards policy-makers and contributing to a better understanding of complex global health issues. Research was conducted on Governance for Health, Universal Health Coverage, as well as Health in the Post-MDG (Millennium Development Goals) Process. A new volume in the World Scientific Publishers Series on Global Health Diplomacy, entitled 21st Century Global Health Diplomacy, was also published.

The Programme is also a think-tank and platform for policy dialogue. Two public seminars for over 250 people were organised prior to the World Health Assembly on health research and development and health in the post-2015 agenda. The Programme's annual symposium, "Health Diplomacy meets Science Diplomacy", was organised in cooperation with the Swiss Academy of Medical Sciences.

The Programme implemented executive training courses and high-level seminars in global health diplomacy for more than 200 professionals and completed its on-line training project for more than 120 World Health Organization representatives around the world. The first French-language course was conducted and the executive training course in China continued, in 2013 welcoming Swiss Federal Councilor for Health, Alain Berset.

Programme for the Study of International Governance

→ THOMAS J. BIERSTEKER

Director, Professor, International Relations/Political Science and Curt Gasteyger Chair in International Security and Conflict Studies

The Programme offers a forum for faculty and students to interact with practitioners and policy-makers to analyse international governance arrangements across global issues.

In 2013 the Programme co-organised a workshop on “The Global Governance of the Internet,” with the Global Internet Governance Academic Network, for over 200 participants from the private sector, international organisations, academia, and State missions to the United Nations.

A public seminar series was launched, offering students, faculty and practitioners a space to examine theoretical and empirical research on international governance.

Continuing collaboration with the United Nations Office of Geneva and the State of Geneva, the Programme held four International Geneva Luncheons to foster dialogue between scholars and senior United Nations management. A smartphone application, SanctionsApp, was developed with the support of the Swiss Federal Department of Foreign Affairs, presenting the research findings of the Targeted Sanctions Consortium’s project on the effectiveness of United Nations Targeted Sanctions.

Programme on Gender and Global Change

→ ELISABETH PRÜGL

Director, Professor of International Relations/Political Science

The Programme produces innovative research on gender in development and international relations and disseminates knowledge around the world.

In 2013, the Programme built on existing expertise in agriculture and rural development and broadened its work with a stronger focus on developing countries. Two projects were launched on feminism and the politics of change, examining gender experts and expertise. The globalisation of reproduction emerged as a third area of focus with research conducted on international adoptions and embryonic stem cell research in India (see p. 26). Two online courses on gender and development were developed, with one adapted for the Institute’s Executive Education Development Policies and Practices programme.

An international workshop on gender and security was held and subsequently the Swiss National Science Foundation awarded funding for a major study on the gender dimensions of social conflicts, armed violence, and peacebuilding. The project explores the role of gender in processes of violence escalation, de-escalation and non-escalation with case studies in Indonesia and Nigeria.

The programme receives funding from the Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation, the State of Geneva, AVINA Stiftung, Bread for the World – Protestant Development Service and other institutions.

This programme replaces the IMAS established 10 years ago and receives longstanding support from the Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation. It has trained around 400 professionals coming mainly from Southeast and Central Asia, Africa, Latin America, but also from Switzerland and other “northern” countries.

The DPP programme, organised in collaboration with five partner institutions in the South, aims to strengthen organisations active in the field of development and international cooperation by providing strategic analytical and leadership skills to their collaborators

This six-month programme (July-February) includes: five weeks in one of the regional hubs hosted by a partner institution (Accra, Almaty, Bamako, Hanoi, Lima); four months at the participants’ place of work; and three weeks in Geneva.

In 2013, the Executive Master in Development Policies and Practices welcomed new participants from central Asia. A new edition was created the same year for Afghan participants in collaboration with the UNITAR. As a result, 35 more students participated in the 2013 programme.
