

Diana Barrowclough is a Senior Economist in the United Nations Conference for Trade and Development, Division on Globalization and Development Strategies. Before joining the UN, she lectured economics at the University of Cambridge, where she was a Fellow of St John's College. She was educated at the University of Cambridge (PhD Economics) and the University of Auckland (MA Economics and Political Science). Her research interests focus on the interface between public and private sectors and the role of multilateral policy measures to help address global problems. Currently she is a contributing author to the UN Trade and Development Report, the manager of a two-year multi-country Development Account project 'Strengthening pro-growth macroeconomic management capacities for enhanced regional financial and monetary cooperation...' and GDS focal point for presentations and trainings.